

Be a Hero for a Better World

Dwight D. Eisenhower (1890-1969)

"I think that people want peace so much that one of these days government had better get out of their way and let them have it."

General Dwight David Eisenhower was the Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces during World War II and became the 34th President of the United States in 1953. This hero in war was also a hero in peace. Shortly after taking office as President, he chose the path of a diplomat instead of general to help negotiate an end to the Korean War with a personal visit to the UN forces in Korea. During the Cold War he made several overtures to Russian leaders to calm hostilities between the two superpowers, including negotiating the first nuclear arms agreement. President Eisenhower gave aid to Third World countries to help stabilize their political institutions and development. He believed that stable governments and prosperity was the key to peace within these nations, which would contribute to peace around the world. In 1956, Eisenhower created People-to-People, a citizen ambassador program that continues to this day to promote peace between nations by promoting understanding between cultures.

"Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed."

Dwight D. Eisenhower was born on October 14, 1890 in Denison, Texas
